the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are living in poverty has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.6 billion (World Bank 2000).

There are a number of reasons why the number of people living in poverty has increased. One of the main reasons is that the world's population has increased. In 1990, there were 5.3 billion people in the world, and by 2000, there were 6.1 billion. This means that there are now 800 million more people in the world than there were in 1990.

Another reason why the number of people living in poverty has increased is that the world's economy has not grown fast enough. In 1990, the world's economy was worth $2.5 trillion, and by 2000, it was worth $3.5 trillion. This means that the world's economy has only grown by 40% in 10 years. This is not enough to keep up with the world's population growth.

A third reason why the number of people living in poverty has increased is that the world's resources are being used up. The world's forests are being cut down, the world's oceans are being overfished, and the world's soil is being eroded. This means that the world's resources are being used up, and this is leading to a decline in the world's standard of living.

There are a number of things that can be done to reduce the number of people living in poverty. One of the most important things is to increase the world's economy. This can be done by increasing trade, investment, and growth. Another important thing is to protect the world's resources. This can be done by conserving forests, oceans, and soil.

It is important to note that reducing the number of people living in poverty is not just a matter of economics. It is also a matter of justice. It is not fair that some people are rich and some people are poor. We need to find ways to make the world a more just and equitable place.

There are a number of organizations that are working to reduce the number of people living in poverty. One of the most well-known is the World Bank. The World Bank provides loans and grants to help developing countries grow their economies. Another organization is the International Labour Organization (ILO). The ILO works to improve the lives of workers in developing countries.

There are also a number of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) that are working to reduce the number of people living in poverty. One of the most well-known is Oxfam. Oxfam works to help poor people in developing countries. Another organization is Christian Aid. Christian Aid works to help poor people in developing countries.

It is important to note that reducing the number of people living in poverty is not just a matter of money. It is also a matter of education, health, and social services. We need to find ways to improve the lives of poor people in all these areas.

There are a number of things that we can do to help reduce the number of people living in poverty. We can donate money to organizations that are working to help poor people. We can also volunteer our time. We can also try to live more simply and responsibly. We can also try to influence our governments to do more to help poor people.
